1. All units of the Rumanian Armed Forces have two designations: a true designation consisting of the number, type of unit and arm, such as 347th Seaplane Squadron (Escadrila 347 Hidroaviatie) and a pseudo-designation [REDACTED]. The units using such designations are: battalions and units of corresponding size which are subordinate directly to major headquarters, and regiments, major units (brigades and up) and officer's schools.
2. The true designation is considered secret. It is rightfully known by all the personnel assigned to the unit who must not reveal the designation to any outsider, whether military or civilian. The true designation is used only in official communications within the Armed Forces which are classified secret. Actually, the true designation is known by at least some members of the immediate families of the personnel assigned to the unit and by some residents of the area in which the unit is located.
3. The pseudo-designation is the designation by which the unit is known in the area in which it is located, by the families of the personnel attached to it, by the institutions and enterprises with which the unit has to deal. This designation is used by the personnel assigned to the unit whenever they refer to their unit in conversations with outsiders. It is also used in the identity books, leave and travel orders and in the army record books (livrete militare) of the personnel assigned to the unit.
